

Still Life by Noel Coward

The play.

Set in the refreshment room of a railway station, Still Life tells the story of a chance encounter between Laura Jesson and Alec Harvey, each of whom are married and have separate lives. Another chance encounter leads to another, this time arranged meeting. Laura and Alec continue to meet in secret and before long fall in love. However, their romance is not without complications for both are full of guilt and must make a decision as to their future. While Laura and Alec's romance is dramatic and intense, the refreshment room experiences romances of a lighter nature through the romances of Myrtle and Albert and Beryl and Stanley.
